About the Traceability & Trade Project:

This project is dedicated to tracking and understanding the interface between traceability and trade – what is, what is emerging, and what could be in the future. We are researching global innovations in traceability, their regulation, and their interface with international trade rules. The project is funded by the National Agriculture Traceability Grants Program, which aims to strengthen the agricultural sector through technological innovation. Read more here:

How to get to UNSW Sydney

UNSW Law & Justice is accessible by public transport, and is not far from Sydney Airport.

The light rail stops at UNSW on Anzac Parade, just few steps from the Law Building. Catch the L3 Kingsford Service. There are also bus routes - refer to the Public Transport Trip Planner for routes and timetable information.

For information on walking, cycling and parking, see UNSW Getting Here. It will be exam time on campus, so parking should be easier than during term time. Another option is to park in Kingsford or Kensington on a street that is not time restricted and walk or catch the light rail one stop to campus.
